JOHN'S WIFE.

Whatever possessed Brother John to go up to the city and marry that yellow haired, blue-eyed bit of a school girl. when he could have had just his pick of girls nearer home, was something I could not understand. There was Lida. Handscombe, just dead in love with him, as anybody could see, and the best bread-maker in the whole country, beside taking prizes at the State Fair for pickles and jellies, and ever so much better looking, too, than Myra. No yellow bangs over her eyes; she just combed it back off her face and did it up in a hard knot that staid. She sent John a birthday cake, and knit him a comforter, and everybody thought it would be a match, but John said he didn't like her eyes : they were handsome eyes, to my idea, and could look you through and through, they were that clear and bright; but did you ever that ferret," said John, " and never have any peace of my life; well, I guess and with that off he goes to town and telegraphs back, "Expect me and my wife." Then she did the silliest thing of allwent and bought a book called "What I Know About 'Farming," and used to sit out under a tree studying it by the hour; and one night, when she went down to the bars to meet John, I heard her ask:

"John, why don't you get a washing machine and a wringer, and save your own flesh and blood. Look at the blisters on my hands !"

And the next thing it was the talk of provements, had given out before that little pale-faced thing, and not only got and told her what I thought of it after he went out to his work. She looked kind of frightened, and pretended she was going to cry, and then she spoke up

She laid her hand on her heart, and stood looking off with a strange expression on her face, and I thought maybe she was homesick, and I told her to go in and cut some carpet rags, and sow 'em together, and, would you believe it, she up and refused. "No," she said, "I cannot cut any carpet rags. I hate them!" T never saw her so excited before.

"A fine temper you have I" was all the answer I made her, but I never felt so insulted in all my life.

For a week or two I didn't see much of her; she was either out with John 'sketching," as she called it, dabbling away at some bits of pasteboard with a lead pencil, or up in her room where I never went. She came down, singing away, with a large packago in her hand, and soon John chine up with the ponies, and they drove off to town together. laughing like two children. I hope none of the neighbors noticed them. Any way they never saw him conduct himself in that way with me.

She was real ornamental, and I suppose some folks thought she was pretty. John did for one. I don't know that she made me and kept her room neat enough, though it was mostly littered-up with flowers and birds and her sketches, and at first she sang from morning till night, and she did have a real lovely voice. I'll allow that, but after a while she didn't sing and didn't talk much, and then John began taking her meals, upto her. Pho first time I saw him getting

PERSONAL ANECDOTES.

Gen. Cameron once recounted to m any interesting incidents, one of which I recall: "I was one day sitting," said he, it in the saloon of the steame where a boisterous fellow was talking disagreeably of Senator Tom Benton. I listened for a while and finally said to him : 'Your remarks are exceedingly distasteful to me, and I used some other expressions to let him understand that I did not approve of his assault upon

A quaint story of Gen. Some days ago, the President abruptly withdrew, in one and the same act, the names of Golf, Woodford and Mr. Tomey, and of two Marshale. This unprecedinted proceeding, whether permissible by law or not, was gravely significant. The President had nondinated these officers after they had been weighed in the balance. The official record were before him, and had been fully securitized and approved. It must be presumed that he thought the nominations if to be made, and that was his duty to make them. There is no alegation that he discovered on undfirests, them afterward. It could arranged any undimension them afterward. A WONDERFUL LAKE IN IONA.

The greatest wonder in the State of owa, and perhaps in any other State, is what is called the Walled lake, in Wright county, twelve miles north of the Dubuque and Pacific railway, and arth's surface. In some places the wall is ten feet high, fifteen feet wide at the notion, and five feet wide on the top, Another fact is the size of the stone used n the construction, the whole of them arying in weight from three tons down to 100 pounds. There is an abundance of stones in Wright county but sur rounding the lake, to the extent of five time of day will it be 2" asked one of the or six miles, there are none. No one can form an idea of the means employed to bring them to the spot, or who constructed it. Around the entire lake is a belt of woodland half a mile in length composed of oak. With this exception the country is a rolling prairie. The rees must have been planted there at the time of the building of the wall. In the spring of the year 1856 there was n meat storm and the ice on the lake proke the wall in several places, and the armers in the vicinity were obliged to epair the damages to prevent inundaion. The Russians are by no means as dys peptic a race as Americans, for they nave more physical labor and less chance o employ the services of cooks. But there are subjects of the Czar even who over-eat, and suffer in consequence, as other mortals do. They are however, not inclined to blame themselves for attacks of dyspepsia, but think that when meh attacks do trouble them, it is owing to the presence of a snake in the stom ach. It is currently believed that the reptile is very fond of raspborries, and will leave its hiding place whenever it sees or smells them. So the dyspeptic goes into the buth-room (when he wishes to be cured), some raspberries are fotched and strowed on hot stones in the room, over which the sufferer bends with open mouth to facilitate the egress of the scrpent. Should it not make its appearance, charms or incantations are esorted to, and continued till the patient feels better, when the snake is super posed to have left his temporary abode unobserved. Surely the acme of unreason is reached by a people who can believe in such an absurdity. But they have relations in countries west of them people who are equally unable to see what is the real cause of dyspensia, and
